

COVID SLAM STATEMENT:

Mental health is just as important as physical health especially during these trying times.

The engineering and vendor members of AAFAME have been on the front lines at their buildings each day dealing with the ever changing Covid recommendations and restrictions. While most of the management staff is working remotely, the engineers are charged with keeping their buildings up and running at peak efficiency.

Covid Slam was created to give the membership a safe way to relax and recharge amongst their fellow engineers and supporting vendors. Ever since the pandemic started, AAFAME members have been keeping their properties open and operating while implementing the ever-changing restrictions and recommendations from various governmental entities and upper management/ownership. These essential employees know all the Covid recommendations because they have been the ones living the restrictions every day.

AAFAME has gone to great lengths to make this event safer than most anywhere they may go, any day of the week. All attendees must preregister and read and acknowledge a general health statement/requirements (similar to what some management companies require). All attendees must wear a mask and all will be given a mask to take with them. All attendees must have their temperature taken and it must be below 100 before being allowed in the venue. All attendees will be given assigned seating sections that have been set up to meet social distancing requirements. All attendees will be required to follow all social distance markings and directional signage in place throughout the venue. All event contestants will be kept in groups of 10 or less far from the spectators. There will be security personnel who will be ensuring all attendees are following all social distance and mask requirements all during the event. They will be authorized to remove anyone who refuses to comply.

AAFAME is more than just a collection of engineers and vendors. They are a group that is bonded together with common goals and experiences and while they may sometimes work for competing companies, all are glad to share their knowledge to help another with a problem. These essential employees have been handling all the Covid issues and changes each day. They have been in the trenches and know what it takes to keep safe and stay healthy. They need and deserve a break, so Covid Slam was created to give these ladies and gentlemen an event in which to unwind with their fellow members in a safe environment.